- should we

R. Corner quotes CSUM website:

- Some people assume Cal Maritime is a "military" academy because our students wear uniforms, but they are not correct. In fact, 94% of our graduates go directly into for-profit companies, non-profit organizations, government agencies, or graduate schools while 8% graduate as commissioned officers in the military.
- Why push military standards when such a small number of students go into the military

J. Swinehart if you are going to wear a uniform you should wear it right

- When mentioning tradition, I was speaking of tradition in the sense of uniforms and how they are supposed to be worn

N. Carter as someone who has served, this is not a military school

- We should have pride in our uniforms
- Trust must be built between faculty and students

S. Stel reminds us the changes in dress code the resolutions are strict and only compact hair, nails, and piercings

- These changes do not impact professionalism

E. Cole Resolutions to establish what is correct and what is incorrect when wearing the uniform

- These changes should also make it easier to enforce the uniform standards because it would be the same for everyone

R. Masliah

R. Masliah if the concern is looking unprofessional and men abusing the rules in order to have long hair, then one must also also claim that
